Title: Book of Truth

Author:

Charter of the Guild Truth is the cornerstone of civilized life. We of the Legion strive to ensure that Truth is fostered throughout
the lands by word,
 by deed, and by death
if need be. Without Truth, Virtue becomes
dead and meaningless.
Without Truth, Chaos
is but a shallow
concept. Truth
anchors the Paladin,
the Monk and the Merchant- keeping
them whole and with purpose. We of the Legion of Truth do
strive unto and beyond
death to tell the Truth in all cases, at
whatever the cost to ourselves; For only through Truth may
we all live life as it
was meant to be.

Pride...Pride comes before a great fall. - Heph

Deception is the antithesis of Truth. - Wrath, Grandmaster Mage

I walked through Despise this day, ignoring the petty monsters within its halls. I came upon a ghost that cried of its loss at the hand of an evil dread lord. Quickly I returned the spirit to life and we trod after this abomination, mine heart racing as I readied sword and shield. The fellow cried of the evil and horrors that this murderous villian had done, killing him without provocation and without remorse. Mine eyes stared at the darkness, awaiting sight of this grisley devil. As we entered the large cavern of this death, the fellow quailed behind me as the dread lord rose before us. I greeted him, asking after the fellow and his tale. Wrath told me Azal had killed the fellow only after giving him chances aplenty to avail himself of the Truth. As he ticked off the errors the

fellow refused to acknowledge, stealing
and killing needlessly,
lying, among others;
mine eyes grew cold
and dangerous,
turning to the fellow.
He shrank back
against the wall,
shivering as I drew
mine sword again and leveled it at him. "Ye have to count of five to leave mine sight.
One...Two..."He
started to deny, but seeing my gaze, he turned and ᶜᵉed into the halls. After a time, Wrath and I
strode up the
passageway, heading
toward the surface.
As we strode, we
came to a crumpled
body laying near a contented scorpion. We nodded to each other,
and continued on.-RJ,

Death is not the final Truth. It is but part of all Truths. - Wind,

-Heph; Ambassador

of Truth

Heph, you should be a bit kinder, my friend.
Sometimes Truth is best taught with
gentleness, not fear.
-Wrath

You may be right,
Wrath, however, it
was their own
foolishness that killed them, not mine. Had they been honest with
me and themselves,
they would not have
rushed to the depths
of Deceit so soon.
